Comments:

It has been a pleasure to teach Janosne over the last two weeks. As part of her Personal Methodology Course, she has observed a series of lessons taught by experienced teachers, evaluating them in terms of classroom management, lesson staging and teaching technique. She has also explored how to adapt materials with a focus on making practice activities more communicative, personalised, fun and interactive. To consolidate this, she completed an assignment in her Personal Study Programme in which she demonstrated how to adapt course book activities effectively with a particular group of learners in mind. She has also developed her understanding of lesson staging, particularly with regards to language systems and speaking lessons. She has grasped new ideas quickly and is eager to implement what she has seen into her teaching on her return to Hungary.

In her General English class, Janosne has showed great enthusiasm for learning, making the most of activities and working very well with her peers. In the Personal Study Programme, she chronicled all of her new experiences in Newcastle and demonstrated excellent writing skills as well as insight to the process of language learning. Moving forward, I would encourage Janosne to continue to seek out feedback on her English and opportunities to practise her speaking.

We wish her the very best of luck for the future!
